Privacy Policy

Collection of Personal Information

Collection of some personal information is necessary for business. This information includes full name, contact number, e-mail address and in some cases postal address. These details will allow the designer to contact the client, deliver electronic files, and provide postal services if needed. It also provides a level of security to the designer whilst conducting business online.

Documents including invoices and receipts which contain some of this personal information will be kept securely and confidentially for 5 years in line with Australian tax obligations.

Cookies

Origami Graphics uses cookies in its website to improve the user experience and gain demographic information required for effective advertising. The data cookies obtain is anonymous and cookies are used by many websites in this way. However, if you would prefer that your data is not recorded with cookies, you can turn them off in the Privacy section of your browser's settings.

Confidentiality

No material containing personal information collected by Origami Graphics will be shared outside the client-designer relationship without express written permission from the client.

Transactions

Origami does not receive or store any banking information including credit card details. Your payments are securely managed by PayPal, your financial institution and Members Equity Bank Limited.

Failure to Disclose Personal Information

Failure to disclose necessary personal information constitutes a violation of terms and conditions and may result in an inability to continue the project. Negotiation may be attempted to reach a solution before this decision is made. Clients who choose not to supply all requested personal and contact details may be charged a deposit on the project before commencement as a security measure. The designer's rights to charge a deposit at their discretion are outlined in the Terms and Conditions, Section 9.5 – Extra Charges.
